The Gladewater City Council voted unanimously to change the name of the city library to the Lee-Bardwell Library at their regular April 21 meeting. The council posthumously added Suzanne Bardwell's name to that of the founding Lee family to honor Bardwell's steadfast support of the library after the council contemplated closing it due to serious damage sustained during last year's winter storm.

"She was really concerned that the library could be shut down," Mayor J.D. Shipp said. "She was going to do everything in her power to make sure that library stayed open. We will have a new library of the future with a multipurpose platform."

Bardwell, co-owner of Bardwell Ink with her husband Jim, died in a Longview automobile accident in January, but her legacy as an educator and community activist will not be forgotten.

Sorrells, Garland seek council seat

In the only contested Gladewater City Council race, Jacob Jed Garland and Teddy W. Sorrells, Jr. are both seeking the Place 4 seat in the May 7 election. As in years past, the Gladewater Mirror asked the candidates to tell our readers why they should be elected to serve the people of Gladewater. Below are their answers.

1. Please tell our readers

why they should vote for

2. It is no secret the city has aging city infrastructure – the city is currently working to fix the city's water and sewer plants.

JACOB GARLAND

I was born and raised in Gladewater. I graduated from Gladewater Highschool in 2006. My family owned and operated all four Dairy Queens in Gladewater. I moved to Houston, TX when I first started working for The Houston Fire Department. My wife Shayna and I prayed hard about moving back to Gladewater. Our hearts called us back to raise our family in the city we both grew up in. My family and I love this town and want to see it grow and prosper. I have been a part of city government as a firefighter since 2006. I have helped previous Fire Chiefs at Gladewater effectively work on and balance their budgets. By doing so I have a basic understanding of city budgets and needs.

What do you think needs to be done to fix this problem and how will it be funded?

TEDDY SORRELLS

I believe the Gladewater constituency should vote for me because I have a plan on how to move Gladewater into the future. Gladewater's best days are still ahead of us and my plan works alongside our city council and GEDCO to promote more businesses to come to Gladewater. This is the way forward.

My qualifications are plain and simple. I am a tax-paying property owner that lives inside the city limits of Gladewater. I have had 30 years of leadership experience, beginning in the Army as a Combat Medic, to pastoring churches over the last 20 years. I am a capable leader that can work alongside anyone. If the military taught me anything, it was that all kinds of people, from all kinds of backgrounds, can come together with one mission and purpose.

I don't believe there is one solution. I believe that there are multiple solutions that need to come together with one common purpose - to move Gladewater is Texans' reliance on quality broadband services that connect teachers to students, nurses to rural patients, farmers to markets and consumers to products. Access to reliable I strongly believe that Texans deserve access and support." internet and broadband services contributes to a thriving workforce.

Texas communities sound off on broadband access

And yet lack of access to quality broadband threatens communities and their economic and educational prosperity. According to an Ernst & Young analysis of the U.S. Census Bureau's American Community Survey five-year estimates for 2019, almost one in five U.S. households does not have internet of any kind, and 36 percent do not have wireline.

This lagging access disproportionately impacts poorer communities and communities of color. Rural Texans are especially hard hit. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture in 2019, 25 percent of the nearly 247,000 farms in Texas had no internet access.

"The pandemic exposed a lot of cracks in the walls," Comptroller Glenn Hegar said recently. "I'm not overstating

Among the many things the pandemic has revealed, one when I say not having access to quality broadband is like not outline barriers to broadband use, among other challenges. having access to electricity. Parents, teachers, consumers and farmers all depend on these services to live and do business.

> Hegar kicked off his 2022 Texas Broadband Listening Tour with a visit to Prairie View A&M University. The full tour is taking place over two months, making stops in a dozen Texas communities. This "boots-on-the-ground" approach aims to collect raw, unfiltered feedback from Texans about their communities' state of broadband services.

> "Just because a community has DSL doesn't mean it's functional — it might be delivering 2 megabits per second (Mbps)," one Harris County resident reported at an event. (DSL refers to digital subscriber lines that use modems to move data over landlines.)

> The Texas Broadband Development Office (BDO), administered by the Comptroller's office, will compile feedback collected from the tour and use it in the state's first broadband plan, which BDO will publish later this year. The plan will

The Texas Legislature also tasked the BDO with overseeing and awarding grants, loans and other financial incentives to internet service providers who expand access to broadband service in unserved and underserved areas.

The town hall-style tour is multimodal, and feedback is being collected from in-person breakout sessions and conversations. Texans who are not able to attend meetings may still provide feedback and are encouraged to do so via English and Spanish online surveys. PDF copies also are available to print and distribute to libraries, community groups and other organizations and individuals without online services. Feedback will be collected through May 5.

"My goal is really to meet Texans where they are and deeply listen to their experiences with broadband in Texas," Hegar said. "This is by far the best way for my staff to understand and help resolve this issue. I'm especially thankful for those who have taken the time to give us feedback, whether they participated in person or online."

And...

Really we shouldn't have. Important meetings were missed. We often tell ourselves we can't. But the last few days we did...and it was wonderful. Now, don't get me wrong we worked every single day we were on our getaway. Some days required hours of work from our hotel room. Deadlines have to be met regardless of where we are when they hit.

On our last day away we grabbed a lakeside snack at the appropriately named Hanger just to hang out. One of my favorite vacay pics is of my hubby on a phone meeting oblivious to the hot air (how appropriate) balloon going up behind him. We finished off the chips and dip long before the phone meet was done. Despite the meetings, that leisurely day allowed us to handle the stress of the next day.

We left our hotel at 10:30 a.m. for the Orlando airport. Our plane was delayed for takeoff because of weather. We received a text that our connecting flight at DFW to Shreveport was canceled. Our luggage location was somewhere in the 'Twilight Zone'. As we detoured to San Antonio and back up to Dallas our flight time increased and Jim began to look for gremlins on the airplane wing. When we got to DFW the weather worsened and so did the temperature of the hundreds of passengers who were missing their flights. The experience was a revelation.

We watched as meltdowns occurred by infants and infantile adults. We ran from terminal to terminal as our flight was changed, canceled and moved until we finally managed to get one to Gregg County Airport which was added as a connecting leg for about 20 desperate people. We saw one guy beat on the skyway door as he watched his plane for Tyler leave. It really was kind of funny. I am sorry. I usually don't enjoy laughing at someone else's expense but dang, Longview is not that far away and there were plenty of seats on that flying cigar tube for that ranting and raving flyer.

Complicating the entire, and I mean the entire last week of our vacation, as well as the airport trekking about, was the fact that I had walked HUGE blisters onto the balls of my feet. I hobbled. I walked on the sides of my feet. I groaned.

THE ECONOMIST

It was pitiful, but worth the pain and the effort.

On our next to last day we managed to get reservations for "Star Wars Ride of the Resistance". BUT, we were on late standby and my pessimist honey was convinced we would never be called. So, we left Hollywood Studios and rode the skyliners around the (Disney) World and limped back to our room where I peeled off my sticky socks while I cried sticky tears. And then the text came. 45 minutes before the park closed. Our standby group was called. We threw on our shoes...sticky socks and tears again...and I hobbled as fast as my poor old blistered feet could go to the boat transportation which took FOREVER to get rolling. We got to the park at closing and the very kind and grinning gate attendants told us to go to the ride anyway and said that we might get lucky. Of course, it was at the opposite end of the park.

I hobbled as fast as I could go and when we got there the ride was broken down...with an interminably long line. And the park was CLOSED. And they let us get in line. And, we met a wonderful young woman from California pushing her father's wheelchair. He was from Ohio and had met his precious daughter there. He was old school "Star Wars" and so were we. We all hung in there and made the 'ride' that wasn't a ride. It was an experience that was worth the excruciatingly painful feet, the effort, the time, and the trip.

Our true blue dependable son, Josh, picked us up at the Longview airport after midnight and dropped us home on his way to fight fire caused by a lightning strike.

The next day we continued our comedy of errors by driving our un-inspected truck a mile and a half to pick up Jimmy's SUV at the mechanic and then it was on to Shreveport airport to pick up my lonely little Buick. And, at long last, our getaway was over. Now, if these dad blasted blisters will just go away all will be back to our usual 'ab' normal work routine. You know, everyone needs a break before they break. This was ours. AND it was wonderful.

Texas and Russia

The recent invasion of Ukraine by Russia is generating questions regarding how important Russia is to the Texas economy, particularly as policies restricting trade and investment interactions are contemplated. The short answer:

Texas trade with Russia (both imports and exports) was just over $6.0 billion in 2021, only 0.87% of overall Texas global trade. Of the $657.4 million in Texas exports to Russia, the largest categories were machinery (largely oilfield equipment), transportation equipment, computer and electronic products, and chemicals. Texas imported nearly $5.4 billion in comthis pattern will likely change as refineries adapt to higher US production levels and convert to cleaner crude options available from the Permian Basin and Gulf of Mexico. The refined products (over 76% of total Russian imports), could easily be supplied by producers within the state using Texas natural resources (in turn, generating economic benefits).

Any economic stimulus leads to dynamic responses across the economy. For trade, exports involve business activity in Texas to produce and transport the commodities. Imports create downstream effects as they are transported and sold or used in additional production. There are also indirect effects through the supply chain and consumer/induced impacts as

THE FIRST AMENDMENT: Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of all the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

Early voting underway for May 7 election

Early voting began Monday for local elections and two proposed constitutional amendments relating to property tax reductions. Early voting continues through Tuesday, May 3, with election day on Saturday, May 7.

One proposed amendment would authorize the Legislature to limit property taxes on homesteads of elderly or disabled residents, while the other would increase the homestead exemption for school taxes from $25,000 to $40,000.

Voters return to the polls later in May for runoff elections in both the Democratic and Republican primaries. Voters cannot switch parties if they voted in the March 1 primary, but voters who didn't vote in the primary can participate in either party's runoff. A full list of runoff races can be found on the secretary of state's website: sos.texas.gov. Early voting for the May 24 runoff begins on May 16.

"With multiple opportunities to vote in the upcoming May elections, I strongly encourage all Texas voters to get informed about what's on the ballot and make a plan to cast one," Secretary of State John Scott said. To find out what is on local ballots, contact your county's local election office.

Material shortage bedevils TxDOT projects

Shortages of steel and concrete are slowing down road projects and driving up costs, according to an internal memo from the Texas Department of Transportation's construction division director, reported last week by the Quorum Report and kut.org.

"Due to recent circumstances affected by world events, there has been significant volatility in the market for various construction materials. We have seen the availability of some materials become very limited or the material lead time has increased significantly. We have also seen significant increases (over 100% in some cases) in some material prices," Duane S. Milligan wrote.

TxDOT has more than 15,000 projects in the pipeline across the state. The jobs total $156 billion, with about half either underway or set to start soon. Milligan's memo to district engineers and construction managers suggested substituting construction materials when feasible, or removing work or materials from a road project "when the deletion will not affect the safety of the completed project."

Concert safety task force releases report

A task force has issued its findings after investigating the tragedy at the Astroworld Festival last November, when a crowd stampede resulted in multiple deaths and injuries.

The task force formed by Gov. Greg Abbott called for unified command and control, requiring permits even in unincorporated areas, crowd safety training, planning with risk assessment, and centralized resources. Details are available in an event production guide available from the Texas Music Office.

"The recommendations, findings, and solutions detailed in this report will help the state of Texas prevent another tragedy like that at Astroworld Festival from happening again," Abbott said.

modities, with over 90% being crude and refined petroleum products.

The oil imports likely stem primarily from the fact that refineries are designed for specific types and combinations of crude, and Russian products are often included. However,

Read Local company. Local journalists. Local stories. earnings throughout the production process are spent.

When multiplier effects are considered, Texas-Russia trade generates no more than $6.9 billion in annual Texas gross product and 81,348 jobs (and probably much less), with imports comprising the bulk of benefits (primarily through the sale of finished goods). For perspective, total effects comprise only 0.38% of gross state product, 0.35% of earnings, and 0.63% of employment. Moreover, we have ready markets for these exports and sources for imports elsewhere. Thus, the true impact would be negligible.

Another issue is whether public entity investments in Russia should be divested and, if so, what consequences would occur. Data related to investments is limited. We do know, however, that US foreign direct investment in Russia is miniscule, comprising only 0.2% of the total. Available information indicates that for various large Texas public pension funds, well under 1% of investments are linked to Russia, and divesting (which may well happen in any case due to increased risk) should not have any material impact on returns.

It is generally preferable to allow markets to determine where goods are exchanged and money flows, but there are times when humanitarian and geopolitical considerations merit exceptions. Given the size and scope of the Texas economy, severing remaining ties with Russia would not have notable effects on long-term growth. Stay safe!!

Distracted driving spurs fatality increase

Distracted driving deaths increased 17% in 2021 compared to the previous year, taking the lives of 431 people and seriously injuring nearly 3,000. In the wake of that, TxDOT is stepping up its "Talk. Text. Crash." campaign. The initiative urges drivers to "keep their heads up, put their phones down and just drive."

"Texans are killed each year simply because someone was distracted by their phone, radio, navigation system, eating or drinking, or even by others in the car," Marc Williams, TxDOT executive director, said. "When your focus isn't on driving, you're putting yourself, your passengers and everyone else on the road at risk."

The agency reminds drivers that any distraction is dangerous. It urges drivers to pull off the road entirely before talking or texting and turning off the phone while driving.

COVID-19 cases, deaths rise

The number of new COVID-19 cases in the past week in the state rose to 23,363, and deaths more than doubled to 209, according to the Coronavirus Resource Center at Johns Hopkins University. The number of lab-confirmed COVID-19 hospitalizations dropped slightly, with 755 reported across the state by the Texas Department of State Health Services.

LIFE'S REQUIREMENTS

Sports teaches many lessons that are essential for a well-orchestrated life. Vince Lombardi, the well-known and very successful football coach of the Green Bay Packers said, "Football is like life-it requires perseverance, self-denial, hard work, sacrifice, dedication and respect for authority." Of course, Lombardi is talking about a successful, well-orchestrated life. Doesn't Christianity require the same? When the above traits of character are missing, you don't have much of a football player, or any other kind of athlete. Spiritually speaking, when these traits are missing in one's life, you don't have much of a Christian either. All of the character traits mentioned by Lombardi, are to be integral parts of the well-rounded Christians life.

For example, we are to add to our faith "perseverance" (2 Pet. 1 6). We are to "deny ourselves" (Matt. 16: 24). We are to "exercise" ourselves unto godliness (1 Tim. 4: 7). Whereas in football this exercise and hard work is physical, the Christian's hard work and exercise is spiritual. We are to present our bodies "a living sacrifice" (Rom. 12: 1). We are to be "dedicated and respectful" of authority (Col. 3: 17).

What kind of life do you want? Do you want a life free of requirements? Or do you want to have life, and have it more abundantly? (Jn. 10: 10). Many folks think that the abundant life, or living life to its fullest, is to "enjoy the passing pleasures of sin," or to "live it up" in the bright lights of the far country of sin, as the prodigal son did, or to "take their ease, eat, drink, and be merry" as the rich fool did. (Heb. 11: 25; Lk. 15; Lk 12). But the truth is, that in order to enjoy life to its fullest is to follow Jesus. Otherwise, one is just here, just existing, and not really living at all! Think on these things.

Often, ATA is quoted for its statistic of an 80,000-driver shortage, and John Esparza, president and chief executive officer of the Texas Trucking Association (TXTA), says the shortfall is growing larger. The school, however, is competing with the trucking industry, which also is trying to buy more trucks. Both the school and the industry face two challenges in their procurement efforts: Production of new diesel trucks is delayed due to supply chain shortages, and used trucks are scarce.

Texas Trucking Industry

Texas is home to almost 200,000 commercial truck drivers and leads the nation in this occupation (Exhibit 1). Truck drivers run different types of routes, from local to regional, intrastate to interstate (also called long haul or over the road). In a state the size of Texas, intrastate routes are plentiful, especially considering that 82 percent of Texas communities depend exclusively on trucks for needed products, according to TXTA.

To drive a "big rig" — or other vehicles with a set weight or passenger load — requires a commercial driver license (CDL). Texas has more than 100 CDL schools, some private and some offered at postsecondary institutions such as San Jacinto College in Pasadena.

Business is Booming

San Jacinto's CDL classrooms are jampacked, especially since the college steered Higher Education Emergency Relief Fund (HEERF) money it received through the federal Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security Act, also known as the CARES Act, toward tuition assistance for students, including those on the CDL track.

Tony Rich, director of the college's Applied training, to inmates. Technology and Trades Department, says enrollment in the CDL program has jumped 250 percent from fall 2020 to fall 2021. "This became a godsend for some who were out of the workforce. They could come in and get training in five to six weeks without a financial burden."

San Jacinto limits enrollment to 12 students

Local company.

Local stories.

The limited capacity has created a sense of urgency for would-be truck drivers. We are full through August," says Rich. "Every seat is taken. When we open up a class, within 48 hours, it's full. We expect to have about 144 [students] in the program this academic year."

Limited capacity has been an issue at driver license offices as well. The Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) opened selected offices on some Saturdays in 2021 for CDL testing, and a pandemic waiver allowed driving schools to administer not only the skills tests allowed under a memorandum of understanding with DPS, but also the knowledge tests. That waiver expired May 31, 2021, but the Legislature passed House Bill (HB) 3395 into law, taking effect Sept. 1, 2021. The law allows other entities or people to administer both tests to relieve the DPS backlog.

Another new law aimed at increasing the number of drivers is HB 3606, which requires the Texas Department of Criminal Justice to allow a public or private entity to offer vocational training, including CDL

It isn't just students rushing through the doors. Recruiters come calling often, Rich says. Some students are offered jobs right away, contingent on them successfully finishing the program, he says. And 90 percent of those who sign up to earn their CDL finish the job.

Rusk, Upshur producers may be eligible for Emergency Conservation Assistance

Tornados caused damage in March to areas of the Counties. If you've suffered severe damage, you may be eligible for assistance under the Emergency Conservation Program (ECP) administered by the Farm Service Agency (FSA) For land to be eligible, the natural disaster must create new conservation problems that, if untreated, would: will be needed to return the land to productive agricultural use * is unusual and is not the type that would recur frequently in the same area

- * affect the productive capacity of the farmland
- * impair or endanger the land

If you qualify for ECP assistance, you may receive costshare levels not to exceed 75 percent of the eligible cost of restoration measures. Eligible socially disadvantaged and beginning farmers and ranchers can receive up to 90 percent of the eligible cost of restoration. #### TPW Magazine Highlights 'Lights Out Texas' Initiative for Spring Bird Migration

AUSTIN— The May issue of Texas Parks & Wildlife magazine, available on newsstands now, highlights the Lights Out Texas campaign, which aims to create a safer spring migration for birds through cities across the state. Lights both attract and disorient the birds.

Based on two decades of research from Chicago, the country's deadliest city for migrating birds (followed closely by Houston and Dallas), darkening the windows produced 11 times fewer bird collisions during spring migration and six times fewer collisions during fall migration.

These results are significant because one of every three birds migrating through the United States in spring and one of every four in fall — nearly 2 billion total — pass through Texas.

The program focuses on peak times, asking businesses to turn off non-essential lights while maintaining security. Houston Audubon began monitoring the results of Lights Out Texas in Houston last year.

The magazine article also highlights what Texans can do

* be so costly to rehabilitate that Federal assistance is or in their own homes to help nocturnal migrating birds because nearly half of all window strikes occur at home windows. For more information about the Lights Out Texas Initiative, visit the BirdCast website .

Library renamed to honor Bardwell

"The woman was absolutely a force of nature," councilman Kevin Clark said. "She said, 'I'm going to prove to you that it's not going to be a penny out of the city's budget,' and I got on board with her a little bit and watched her work. We have not even scratched the surface of how hard she dug in for that library."

The group praised Bardwell for the concept she had for a technologyforward library and for the funding and grants she actively pursued to encourage the council not to give up on having a city library.

"She went to work and came up with grants to do this so Gladewater is going to have a library of the future," councilman Scott Owens said. "We are going to enter a new era. It's not going to be the same library we grew up with. It's going to be something new and exciting and different."

As part of the motion, the council approved new plaques for Bardwell and the Lee family to be placed inside the library to commemorate the contributions of both benefactor's actions to make sure the city keeps a public library.

After meeting in their first of two executive sessions, the council took no action on the attorney's report on Gladewater Retail Partners, Ltd. V. City of Gladewater, et al.

They did take action regarding performance reviews for the city judge and city prosecutor. According to city councilwoman Brandy Flannagan, both employees ranked as exceeding expectations. Therefore, she made the motion for part-time city judge Tim Bryan to receive a pay increase to set his salary at $18,000 per year while part-time prosecutor Madison Hood's annual salary will increase to $13,500 per year with a $100/month car allowance. In second quarter reports from city heads, the finance department reported at the midway point of the fiscal year that revenues are on track, but every department is over budget in fuel as to be expected, but no department has spent over 50% of its budget other than building and grounds and capital outlay where some annual contracts lead to overages in the midpoint.

Code Enforcement reported on the recent citywide clean-up where 30.88 tons of refuse was collected along with $1,700 of scrap metal.

Gladewater Economic Development Corporation's new director Michelle Palmer reported that the organization has been pursuing training and has 10 prospects for this quarter and one contract that is in current negotiations.

The council also heard from the fire department and praised them for an excellent job with the monthly food drive and for improving the culture and morale in the department.

Two challenges that the council is facing or will face is replacing the roof that covers the police and fire building at the estimated cost of $60,000 and increased chemical costs at the water treatment plant due to black oil being put into the city's drainage system.

"We have backtracked it, and there is no obvious way it should be coming in," City Manager Ricky Tow said. "We have checked the nearby businesses, TCQ and the Railroad Commission as well. It hit us, and then it went away for about two months and then we got hit again. We are searching backwards, but it will hurt us. We can't get that oil out of the pipe."

Tow went on to say that the main trunk pipe would eventually have to be replaced because despite the city's crew cleaning it with their equipment, the oil never totally goes away and will clog the pipe at some point.

"We are actively keeping an eye on it," Tow said. "The enzymes are helping, eating some of that up. We are trying everything in that area to resolve it."

In other business, the council approved several measures unanimously:

• a Special Use Permit to sell beer and wine for on-premise consumption at the new wine bar Fun & Finer Things located at 124 S. Main. The grand opening is slated for this summer.

• Jaxxon Cook's Eagle Scout project which will add Little Free Library cabinets in Gladewater's three public parks. Councilman Rocky Hawkins volunteered to be the council's representative for the project.

• an annual review of the personnel policy handbook each year for city employees who will be asked to sign off on their review of policies

• to suspend the effective date proposed by Center-Point Energy to increase rates so that more study can be done by the Alliance of CenterPoint Municipalities

During the second executive session, the city discussed performance reviews for the City Manager, City Clerk and City Treasurer.

Nursing in Texas Charting the State's Nursing Profession

Nursing today has come a long way since the days of Florence Nightingale and Clara Barton and involves a broad scope of duties requiring extensive education and a technical skill set. Nursing is one of the most in-demand fields in the health care industry. It also is one of the most challenging. Nurses are responsible for providing high-quality and high-volume patient care while applying the latest medical technologies — often in stressful and difficult situations and the need for nurses often outpaces the supply.

In 2021, nearly 400,000 nurses were working in Texas, representing different levels of the profession: certified nursing assistants (CNAs), who are unlicensed but ancillary to the nursing profession; licensed vocational nurses (LVNs); registered nurses (RNs); and advanced practice registered nurses (APRNs) such as nurse midwives, nurse practitioners and nurse anesthetists. Each category requires a progressively higher level of education and training.

Fifty-eight percent of nurses in Texas are RNs, followed by LVNs at 16.7 percent and CNAs at 20.1 percent. APRNs are a comparatively small group, comprising just 5.2 percent of Texas nursing employment, but they command much higher wages (Exhibit 1). The annual wages of RNs in Texas typically start at $57,300 and increase to $86,500, depending on their level of experience. On average, nurse anesthetists are paid the most, with some earning more than $200,000 per year.

According to the Texas Board of Nursing's 2021 Annual Report (PDF), new licenses are growing the fastest for advanced practice registered nurses in Texas — a 12 percent increase from fiscal 2020 to fiscal 2021. New RNs increased by 3.5 percent during the same time, but the number of vocational nurses declined by 1.7 percent.

Though 41.1 percent of Texas nurses work in hospitals, nurses also fill a variety of positions in other health care settings such as long-term care facilities, doctors' offices, schools and businesses

The quality of health care and Texans' access to it could be at risk due to a nationwide nursing shortage. As our population ages and the demand for health care continues to grow, the number of nursing school graduates simply is not keeping pace with demand. In a 2019 survey by jobs site CareerCast, RNs were the fifth most in-demand profession in the United States.

According to a March 2022 NurseJournal analysis of U.S. Bureau of Health Workforce data, Texas had the fourthlowest nurse-to-population ratio among all states, with only 9.25 nurses per 1,000 residents. The Texas Center for Nursing Workforce Studies (TCNWS), part of the Center for Health Statistics at the Texas Department of State Health Services, conducted a March 2021 study of the projected demand for nurses in Texas (PDF). Demand Projection, which used 2018 as its baseline year and projected nursing demand through 2032, concluded that Texas faces an increased shortage in every nursing category if, as expected, demand continues to outpace the supply. The supply of vocational nurses, for example, is expected to grow 13.8 percent by 2032, but the demand will grow by 45.5 percent. The outlook for RNs also is dire: The study estimates that 16.3 percent of the projected demand for registered nurses in 2032 will not be met.

Although the demand for nurses is expected to increase in all settings, the largest shortage of RNs is expected primarily in inpatient hospital settings. Shortages of vocational nurses are expected to fall on inpatient hospital settings and nursing homes almost equally (see "Elder Care in Texas"). Shortages are expected to be worse in rural areas of the state.

The state's aging population — which comes with a higher degree of chronic medical conditions such as diabetes, obesity and dementia — puts pressure on Texas' already overburdened nursing workforce, and the COVID-19 pandemic hasn't helped. Because of the pandemic, nurses have been working longer hours, seeing more difficult cases and dealing with the constant threat of exposure to a deadly disease with a dramatic impact on the nursing workforce.

"COVID-19 has really increased the shortage," says Texas Board of Nursing's executive director, Kathy Thomas. "Nurses are walking out. They're worn out, they're burned out and they're stepping away from their jobs."

Thomas is particularly concerned about what she called a "severe" shortage of vocational nurses in long-term care facilities such as nursing homes. "Many new nursing graduates want to go work in the emergency room or the ICU, not a nursing facility — but that's where the need really exists."

and focus on completely rebuilding the infrastructure in that area should be the main priority. The way things have been done, by applying "band aids" to leaks and kicking the can down the road until the next leak does not appear to be working. After the City of Gladewater's most problematic areas have been repaired, we can slowly expand to eventually reconstruct the whole system. We need to continue looking into federal and state grant programs to help offset the cost of the work and do what we can to mediate these issues. When the Toll 49 route is being built and comes through Gladewater. We need to work together with TXDOT make sure Gladewater's water mains are not overlooked going around the Loop.

Lowering taxes will be a long-term goal. We must focus on ways that we can entice commercial and industrial business to the move into the Gladewater area. I've been told that losing just one major business in Gladewater is the equivalent of 60 new homes being built. We can draw in as many new residents as we want, but until we can bring more business opportunities to Gladewater, we will never be able to sufficiently see the growth and support that are needed to alleviate the cities taxation issues. I would like to see if we could attract some sort of shipping hub, like Amazon, Walmart, or any other large chain. By doing this it will help with creating jobs for the citizens of Gladewater and bring much needed tax dollars. I think this could be done, just look how The Dollar Store Hub was built on George Richie in Longview. Gladewater is a prime location being so close to I-20, and at the crossroads of 271 and 80 between Longview and Tyler.

I have not met, nor do I personally know Mr. Sorrells, so I can't say what sets me apart. From my understanding we are both from Gladewater and have a passion for the community. We both appear to have a strong faith and relationship with the Lord, my faith is the foundation for me and my family, and Mr. Sorrells has started a church here in town. Mr. Sorrells very well might make a great council member. I can tell you that I know I have a passion for Gladewater, and I have a passion for helping and protecting others. I love my family and I love being a firefighter. I will do whatever I can to make Gladewater the best place to raise my family and for all of us to live long into the future.

forward. One of the biggest issues with infrastructure in our city is funding. Yes, it's an aging city that has many immediate needs. There is one way we can begin to bring more revenue into our city. Gladewater needs to make our city attractive to businesses. Commerce is going to generate sale-tax revenue. Sale-tax revenue is the quickest and most sustainable way to increase funding, which will increase our city budget, which will in turn allow us to fast-track some of our immediate infrastructure needs.

As a council member, what can the city do to lower taxes to make Gladewater a more attractive place to move to?

Property taxes are something that our state legislature is fervently trying to remedy. I believe our city needs to make some adjustments to incentivize investors to come to our city to create new commerce. We can do some things within our city government where we could adjust zoning that will be attractive to outside businesses along with working alongside GEDCO.

I am a huge proponent of young people stepping into leadership roles. We need the next generation to step up and lead in all walks of life. I have a high degree of respect for my opponent who isn't shying away from this sort of leadership. However, with age comes experience, and with experience comes wisdom. I believe this is what sets me apart from my opponent. My experience and wisdom place me in a better position to help lead our city into the next chapter.

I am also not only a resident of Gladewater, but I also work in Gladewater. I am in this city working, listening, and ministering seven days a week. The way I understand it, my opponent is a Firefighter that works in Houston. I am not aware of how his shifts at Houston FD fit into his weekly schedule, but a significant amount of his week is spent in Houston for work. I do not hold this against him, a man needs to earn an income and take care of his family. This is commendable. But when it comes to serving our city as a councilman, I believe I am best suited because I live and work in Gladewater.

member of the family for more information.

Winnie never met a stranger. Her warmth and generosity made a mark on all who came into contact with her. She was also known to be open and honest, and quick with a laugh. She spent her time reading every local newspaper she could get her hands on and tending to her flowers, hummingbirds, and Bella, the horse in pasture across from her home. Her favorite color was purple, though she gravitated toward everything vibrant and cheerful. Holidays were a specialty for Winnie, who would spend months preparing Easter baskets or a Thanksgiving meal, and everyone was invited. Her grandsons brought her particular joy when they would arrive jumping up and down to see "Grammy," who always had a small gift in hand. But her greatest joy came from the deep love she shared with her husband. Married for 45 years, they were an inseparable pair and never had an unkind word for each other.

Born February 12, 1949 in Nashua, New Hampshire, to John and Winifred Murphy Molis of Hollis, New Hampshire, Winnie and her older brothers, Chris and Bill Molis, grew up on a 98-acre farm atop Federal Hill in Hollis, helping their parents and farmhands work the land while attending public schools in Hollis and Nashua.

The farm proved to be a reasonably fertile enterprise where crops were concerned, but the life was hardscrabble for the small family. In the end, the Molises lost their investment to a bank foreclosure, and the result was devastating for the family.

Winnie, who always loved working on creative projects, turned to training herself in graphic arts and design, working with the American Heart Association, Manchester, N.H. TV station WMUR, and other clients, including Royal Press in Manchester.

It was at Royal Press that she met and worked with a Texas transplant, Jeff Newman. The pair soon married and over the years raised two remarkable children: Julia, a professional photographer in New York, Dallas, and elsewhere, and Jordan, a doctoral candidate in geology at the University of Texas at Dallas.

In Texas, Winnie and Jeff worked at the Gladewater Mirror for more than a decade before founding the White Oak Independent in the late 1980s. That paper grew in circulation and consistently won awards in the Texas Press Association's annual judging: It took the "sweepstakes" award for best newspaper in its division for five straight years, three of those under Winnie's sole management.

As competent as Winnie was in her hard-nosed news work, she was best known for her vibrant personality. "She would light up the room when she showed up," as one of her friends remembered.

That humanitarian bent carried over to her personal attitudes of acceptance for all. She'd tolerate anyone but intolerant ones. Indeed, she bent over backward to show acceptance to the underdogs in society. The New England ethics in her particularly hated racial prejudice, and she never held back in expressing that contempt for Klan and similar racist activities in some East Texas communities she lived in or near—and she didn't care who heard her denunciations, either. She was a brave and beautiful soul.

Winnie is survived by her husband, Jeff Newman of White Oak; daughter Julia Newman and her husband Elkin Pautt (who Winnie called her "son-inlove") of Dallas and their children Rio Newman Pautt and Knox Newman Pautt; and her son and "daughter-in-love" Jordan and Anna Newman of Plano. She will be dearly missed.
